The bulk of his poems are in the shi style, but his poetic fame rests largely on his 350 ci style poems. Along with his colleague Wei Pu in the Bureau of Astronomy, Shen Kuo plotted out exact coordinates of planetary and lunar movements by recording their astronomical observations three times a night for a continuum of five years. Furthermore, the European printing press, first invented by Johannes Gutenberg 1398—1468 , was eventually wholly adopted as the standard in China, yet the tradition of woodblock printing remains popular in East Asian countries still.

Shen Kuo

He not only passed the exam, however, but placed into the higher category of the best and brightest students.

Shen Kuo

As of 1054, Shen began serving in minor, local governmental posts. In modern times, the best attempt at a complete list and summary of Shen's writing was an appendix written by Hu Daojing in his standard edition of Brush Talks, written in 1956.
