In 1819, some of its churches had come under the care of Presbyteries connected with the General Assembly; and previous to 1825 there were but two or three which were not connected with the Presbytery of North River or the Presbytery of New York. Several others were from New England, but they were for the most part educated or ordained within the bounds of the Presbyterian Church. Cross's letters, the representations emanating from the hostility of the Philadelphia Synod, and the prejudice excited by the Nottingham strmon, the friends of the enterprise increased every day.

A letter to a friend (1755 edition)

To live in Christ is to share the fruits of His mysterious passion. It was far above what either member of the deputation had dared to hope.

A letter to a friend. Giving a concise, but just, representation of the hardships and sufferings the town of Boston is exposed to and must undergo in consequence of the late act of the British

With the greatest earnestness he urged them to watch over their own souls, and not to bring dishonor on the cause to which they were attached. And do count them but dung. The resurrection as the pledge of eternal happiness in heaven.
