GEOFFREY CHAUCER : POEMS : MISCELLANEOUS POEMS

Candid, and generous, and just, Boys care but little whom they trust, An error soon corrected— For who but learns in riper years That man, when smoothest he appears, Is most to be suspected? A single gathering of a quarto book, then, would be a sheet folded twice, containing four leaves, eight pages of text. Disputes, though short, are far too long. Where both alike are in the wrong; Your feelings in their full amount Are all upon your own account. By expectation every day beguiled, Dupe of to-morrow even from a child.

And sneer, if you please, he had said, A nymph shall hereafter arise, Who shall give me, when you are all dead, The glory your malice denies; Shall dignity give to my lay, Although but a mere bagatelle; And even a poet shall say, Nothing ever was written so well. So his lordship decreed with a grave solemn tone, Decisive and clear, without one if or but— That, whenever the Nose put his spectacles on, By daylight or candlelight—Eyes should be shut! So stands a kingdom, whose foundation yet Fails not, in virtue and in wisdom laid, Though all the superstructure, by the tooth Pulverized of venality, a shell Stands now, and semblance only of itself! She thus maintains divided sway With yon bright regent of the day; The Plume and Poet both we know Their lustre to his influence owe; And she the works of Phœbus aiding, Both Poet saves and Plume from fading With toilsome steps, and difficult, moves on.

Commemorative Feelings, or Miscellaneous Poems.

But the sea-fowl is gone to her nest, The beast is laid down in his lair; Even here is a season of rest, And I to my cabin repair. Once on a time an emperor, a wise man, No matter where, in China or Japan, Decreed that whosoever should offend Against the well-known duties of a friend, Convicted once, should ever after wear But half a coat, and show his bosom bare. Cocoa-nut naught, Fish too dear, None must be bought For us that are here: No lobster on earth, That ever I saw, To me would be worth Sixpence a claw.

Miscellaneous Poems (Lowell)

De sacrī autem hæc sit una sententia, ut conserventur.

Poems (Pushkin, Panin, 1888)/Miscellaneous Poems

My fugitive years are all hastening away, And I must ere long lie as lowly as they, With a turf on my breast, and a stone at my head, Ere another such grove shall arise in its stead. The term implies that the binding is modern, or recent, unless otherwise specified.

GEOFFREY CHAUCER : POEMS : MISCELLANEOUS POEMS

Me fruitful scenes and prospects waste Alike admonish not to roam; These tell me of enjoyments past, And those of sorrows yet to come. Five suns successive rose and set, And saw no monarch in his state, Wrapt in the blaze of majesty, So free from every care as I. Thy grain to eat art thou not free? Now it is plain That struggling and striving is labour in vain.
