Goal 3

Some economists and scientists forecast a global ecological crisis if energy use is not contained — the is an example. A study was carried out by Costanza and colleagues to determine the 'value' of the services provided by the environment. Environmental economics is a subdiscipline of economics, so it's applying standard economic thinking to the environment.

Goal 3

Most were ecosystem ecologists or mainstream environmental economists, with the exception of Daly.

Environmental Economics

Many members of the school have non-economic backgrounds, which facilitates exchange between different disciplines. Ecosystems and Human Well-Being: Biodiversity Synthesis.

Goal 3

Civilization: Its Economic Basis, Historical Lessons and Future Prospects. Distribution has many different impacts, not the least of which is its impact on social capital and on quality of life. If we switched and said that what we really wanted to improve is GPI, then there are ways we can do that without increasing GDP.

Ecological Economics

These are the mainstream new resource economists, the new environmental pragmatists, and the more radical social ecological economists. Ecological economists are inclined to acknowledge that much of what is important in human well-being is not analyzable from a strictly economic standpoint and suggests an interdisciplinary approach combining social and natural sciences as a means to address this.
