Jackson does a riveting job at offering his point of view without judgment. On the south wall of Cave 285 of the Mo Kao Grotto at Dunhuang, northwest China's Gansu Province, there is a very exquisite flying figure playing the harp, which actually originated in Western Asia 6,000 years ago.

Introduction to African Civilizations by John G. Jackson

Toynbee thinks that a civilization arises as a reaction to certain stimuli, and after undergoing a period of growth that implies an increase of control over their environment produced by a creative minority, this period will be followed by times of difficulties, the birth of a universal state and an eventual collapse.
