And in the context of all that, the nature of the poststructuralist purchase referred to above — both in its strength and weakness — can perhaps appear more clearly if this question of singularity can now come in for some consideration, even if only briefly. Related Article Post war, Russia was undergoing radical changes and revolutions, and the impact of these revolutions on architecture was inevitable. Thus, in order to examine the discursive construction of subjectivities, this thesis critically engage with border policy, and more particularly with the European Agenda on Security EAS and the European Agenda on Migration EAM ; agendas produced during 2015 and thus has the potential to affect the future European collective identity.

If there is anything monolithic in the posthuman it is here, in this technological imperative to which posthumanism appears subject. Code, performing as the interface between humans and programmable media, functions in the contemporary cultural Imaginary as the shadowy double of the human-only language inflected and infected by its hidden presence. .

Stanford, CA: Stanford University Press. The accents, the idioms, the terminologies, the tones, the styles, the pitches of critical inquiry inevitably undergo transformation in apprehending all that. Perhaps this somewhat convoluted explanation begins to give a sense of deconstructive practice which is about the work of opening up meanings and interpretations, rather than closing them down.
