A Poetic Anthropology of War: Jean Baudrillard and the 1991 Gulf War

London: Institutum Pataphysicum Londiniense 2005. This was a challenge to me. This deluxe banality is semiurgical: the participatory sign-work of consumption shopping, using customer services, seeking entertainment in the climate-controlled interiors of malls equates maximal comfort and satisfaction with the maximal exclusion of the real, the social, and history.

The Uncollected Baudrillard

Chomsky, Noam 1992 : The Media and the War: What War?. Does he see himself as an academic, as a writer, as an activist, or some combination of those or other labels? His aesthetic and political interests are shown to be more deep-rooted and reflexive. During this period, he met and studied the works of Henri Lefebvre, whose critiques of everyday life impressed him, and Roland Barthes, whose semiological analyses of contemporary society had lasting influence on his work.

Jean Baudrillard, The Uncollected Baudrillard

Baudrillard was not highly regarded or respected by my friends, and by my intellectual-academic-political colleagues and acquaintances. The duel, though, does not belong to the order of reality. The result is a confused condition where there are no more criteria of value, of judgement, or of taste, and the function of the normative thus collapses in a morass of indifference and inertia.

Jean Baudrillard's The System of Objects

He either himself edited several of these essays, or gave me very valuable editing advice or instructions on what to change. By the twentieth century consumption was not — indeed could not — remain the preserve of the wealthy alone.
