Whose Shoes

The Obs Pod has become a phenomenal resource.

Whose Shoes?: A Shoe for Every Job by Stephen R. Swinburne

A little girl mouse tries on everyone's shoes in turn one day. Never underestimate the importance of surroundings and this challenge has highlighted that for me. Another last year was from Nicola : the wonderful crowdsourced NobodyToldMe book, full of positive images and stories of children with Down Syndrome.

Whose shoes rings louder?

The energy is growing ... Since the Gloucestershire event, I have had several extraordinary opportunities to join conversations, hear different perspectives and ensure that our Whose Shoes material remains topical, authentic and able to spark the understanding that is needed. Last Friday, 3 Feb 2017, we were invited to present a MatExp Whose Shoes? The book opens with a few brief statements about shoes and then moves into a guessing game for the second half of the book. After spending time in a room that has seen better days, I can believe it.

Whose Shoes? by Anna Grossnickle Hines

We are trying to pull together lots of ideas for positive change, with or without a workshop.
