The Politics of Racism in France

Beyond street protests, the questioning of celebrated public figures—living or dead—because they are considered deeply objectionable is becoming an increasingly powerful force in France. Finally, on October 17, 1961, during a manifestation organized by the Front of National Liberation, 11,538 people were arrested and over 100 were killed. He continues his work in the fields of colonialism and Africa, and the Balkans.

In 1895, the real culprit, Commander was found, judged and although abundant proof of his guilt was brought to court, acquitted. What is a real privilege is not having to think about what color and race you are, living as if you were the owner of everything in the public sphere, going to the school and the house of worship you want, dressing as you wish, walking the streets and taking the bus without being bullied as if you were a criminal.
