The Arna

While many Greek works available to modern readers were preserved and copied down by later civilizations such as the Byzantines, an extraordinary number of the sources we have for this saga have been dated to the 1300's: 21 of the 60 manuscripts. Hallgerður provokes the first death but not the second, although it follows from a disagreement between her and her husband.

Njáls saga

The saga is now believed to have been composed in the period from 1270 to 1290.

The Arna

But as Gunnar leaves home, he looks homeward and, touched by the beauty of his homeland, resolves not to leave Iceland, thus becoming an outlaw. The vellum manuscripts were classified most recently by in 1953, en route to his 1954 edition of the saga, which remains the standard edition. In his view, the course of events is foreordained from the moment Hrútr sees the thieves' eyes in his niece and until the vengeance for Njáll's burning is completed to the southeast in.
