Animal Architects How Insects Build Their Amazing Homes PDF Book

Contrary to common notions, termite mounds are not high-rise residence halls.

Pests Can Already Be “Built

Because different species may be treated differently, be sure an ant problem is correctly identified before attempting control. Yellowjackets Yellowjackets are social wasps that often build their nests underground in old rodent burrows or hollow wood. Read up more on this by heading up to the 'Pests' tab at the top of this web page and reading under slugs.

How Termites Work

This can include lumber, branches, tree stumps, and thick mulch and leaf litter next to buildings. Maybe some ants and small beetles or flying insects inside and some bees buzzing nearby? Ants can also be a nuisance in lawns because of the mounds they produce, especially if they are abundant.

Or, you can cover the container with a piece of fine mesh or screen and wrap a rubber band tightly around the opening.

How to Make an Insect Hotel: 10 Steps (with Pictures)

If it is not clear where the ants are entering, then treat a 2- to 4-foot wide area around the entire building. Two quick diagnostic tests, the ballpoint pen test and the frass test, can help distinguish among the three groups of wood-boring beetles. Scientists have studied these amazing habitats, baffled by how such a small animal, less than the size of a paperclip, could move such an impressive amount of soil.
