Disbelieving the Importance of Mothering

The attitude reminds me of a view called preformationism, the scientific perspective common in the 17th century that an organism is born with all parts formed, and so the only difference between a baby and adult is size. But after babies died in these impersonal but hygienic settings, studies were done comparing babies in the best quality institutions with those from poor families.

Mothering Quotes (76 quotes)

Watson's unscientific approach to this subject still reverberates through the U. I wish I could give you The remainder of my life To add to yours, Or simply erase The lines on your face, And mend all that has been torn.
