A Fat Man atomic bomb was 60 inches 1,500 mm wide and weighed 10,000 pounds 4,500 kg , and there was no aircraft in the Navy's inventory that could carry a bomb that wide, but the P2V could carry the slimmer 28-inch 710 mm Little Boy bomb. Burke had run tests which showed the Navy was already in possession of a fighter aircraft, the F2H Banshee, that could reach high enough altitudes to intercept bombers like the B-36, and he knew it would be unreasonable to assume that an opposing major world power would not also have developed such an aircraft.
