Mongolia's Most Threatened

Mammals

The Mammals of China and Mongolia, Part 1. This has become very important as many zoos in North America are reporting infertility issues and, as a result, not many foals have been born in the last ten years.

Competition alters plant

The hybrids look like Przewalski's horses, and the only way to identify them is through chromosome testing. There are currently about 650 Bactrian camels in China and about 450 in Mongolia. According to the International Union for Conservation of Nature IUCN Red List, the Bactrian Camel has been listed as a critically endangered species since 2002 and its population has been decreasing.

Dugongs can be spotted alone, in pairs, or in large herds.

Mongolia's Most Threatened Mammals

The in and were hunted to extinction by the middle of the 20th century, and in attempts to introduce to fill their ecological role have failed.

Camel Fact Sheet

Some of the species that are wild ancestors of the domesticated animals still roam in Altai Mountains.

Ostrich

There are about 220 artiodactyl species, including many that are of great economic importance to humans. They are often found in elevated forests and are well adapted to cold temperatures. The following tags are used to highlight each species' conservation status as assessed by the : EX Extinct No reasonable doubt that the last individual has died.
