With grave threats and actual physical harm being casually directed upon them, members and non-members have limited if not stopped their agricultural endeavors. For over forty years, academics, government and security officials, business executives, and journalists have relied on Asian Survey to keep them well informed on a broad spectrum of current Asian issues and developments. In effect, the members and residents have seemingly become more politically aware, determined, and militant as they have proven in practice the real intent of government and real estate developers.

Consequently, local oppositional politics acquires a broader meaning and goal due to the existence of a larger social movement. And on 16 April, its leaders and members locked the gates of DAR with an extraordinarily big padlock and fenced the gates with big bamboo shanks. It also struggles for immediate economic relief for the peasants, launches programs and projects for livelihood and production, health, sanitation, disaster relief, and technology-development.
