We do not have a perfect planning system, but we do have a process which provides everyone with a real opportunity to comment on the way our towns and cities develop; and, theoretically at least, the more people do so, the better the places we create will serve us.

The Citizen's Guide to Planning by Herbert H. Smith

Local governments will have different communication needs and a varying need for citizen comment or involvement depending on the particular type of situation. Authors Duerksen, Dale, and Elliott have maintained favorite sections—such as the list of key planning law cases and the full text of APA ethical considerations—and provided readers with new chapters emphasizing energy conservation, energy generation, and land efficiency. The solution — reached in 1947 with the passing of the Town and Country Planning Act — was simple and radical, and has essentially remained in force since then.
