But how exactly did God bring about these physical blessings of national greatness? Over 320,000 people live here.

Quiz: Test Your British Geography Knowledge

England has the highest population density and Scotland has the lowest. Bands of hunters returned to Britain following the herds of reindeer and horses as they grazed the newly-growing grasslands, and later the deer, wild cattle and pigs that foraged in woodland. The first settlers entered Britain across Doggerland, the lowlands of what is now the North Sea, probably following animals such as reindeer, or travelled in boats along the Atlantic coast to the western parts of Britain.
