Pack Goats

This breed makes for an excellent watch goat which is not noisy but will stare in an alarm posture. LaManchas will follow you anywhere and therefore are a little easier to train.

Pack Goats: Packing Quite a Kick!

You can never be heavy-handed with them. Pack Goats are a steeper learning curve than most believe. It should have good bone size in its legs and feet.

Pack Goats

Crossing them with the dairy breeds for pack goats gives you a more sturdy frame and an animal that will be able to pack more weight when mature. Alpine goats can come in any color, their ears are upright and they are an alert. I hope this site is helpful and if so...please share it with others! A healthy and fit adult pack goat can carry up to 25 percent of its weight and walk up to about 12 miles per day depending on its load weight, the terrain, and the animal's conditioning.

Pack Goats: Packing Quite a Kick!

Pack goat breeds range from Kiko goats to Saanens to Toggenburgs.

About Breeds

If you have a chance to observe the kid before you buy, get one that is bright-eyed and follows you around. Then we will follow back up with you and help you get your deposit in and a setting at the table this spring.
