Human Rights

One version of this idea is that people are born with rights, that human rights are somehow innate or inherent in human beings see Morsink 2009.

Human Rights Watch

Maurice Cranston opposed social rights by suggesting that social rights are mainly concerned with matters such as holidays with pay that are not matters of deep and universal human interests Cranston 1967, 1973. Two people can have the same general idea of human rights even though they disagree about which rights belong on a list of such rights and even about whether universal moral rights exist. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights was adopted by the United Nations after the Second World War.

Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Human Rights as Politics and Idolatry. Such justifications should also be capable of providing starting points for justifying a plausible list of specific rights on starting points and making the transition to specific rights see Nickel 2007; see also below. It issues warnings to attempt to prevent serious contraventions of the convention.

Universal Declaration of Human Rights

This means that we are all equally entitled to our human rights.
